

What do you can do during the Christmas day in New York?

The best Christmas shows in NYC

Holiday Inn

Get ready for a "White Christmas"—an Irving Berlin hit that features prominently in the Roundabout Theatre Company's latest musical. This peppy, family-friendly affair follows the same story as the 1942 movie, which starred Fred Astaire and Bing Crosby. A vaudeville veteran turns a sleepy Connecticut farmhouse into a song-and-dance inn. Gordon Greenberg directs a cast that includes the charming Bryce Pinkham (A Gentleman's Guide to Love and Murder).

Company XIV: Nutcracker Rouge

Austin McCormick and his risqué neo-Baroque dance theater Company XIV present a lavish erotic reimagining of the classic holiday tale, complete with circus performers, operatic singers and partial nudity. Definitely leave the kids at home: The word nutcracker has customarily conjured innocent wonder; now be ready to add glitter pasties, stripper poles and comically large stuffed penises to the toys to expect in wonderland.

Paul Winter's 37th Annual Winter Solstice Celebration

Cathedral of St. John the Divine is the largest cathedral in New York City and one of the loveliest; entering its elegant confines could cheer up even the grinchiest among us. At this nonreligious celebration of the season, watch dancers, musicians and actors reenact ancient solstice rituals for a modern audience. And rock & roll devotees, take heed: This year's celebration also includes a tribute to Beatles producer George Martin and features the vocals of Gary Brooker, lead singer of Procol Harum.

Best Christmas things to do in NYC

Taste of Home Gingerbread Boulevard

Here's proof that life-size gingerbread houses exist outside of fairytales, and you can spot several of them in Madison Square Park! Wander down Gingerbread Boulevard and ogle —no, salivate—over the candy-covered village while sipping complimentary Folgers coffee and munching on M&Ms, Twix, Snickers and Dove chocolates. (Y'know, to keep you from nibbling the scrumptious houses).

Bank of America Winter Village at Bryant Park

You thought you had checked everyone off your list...until you discover your brother is bringing his girlfriend's sister's boyfriend to the Christmas party this year. But there's good news for slackers—the Bryant Park holiday market is staying open on the 25th, so you can make a last-second stop for Christmas presents at one of the 128 local and pop-up vendors hawking everything from food and décor to accessories and art.
